About The Seminar

The international and domestic legal framework around sports is constantly evolving and shaping. To grasp the ever-changing dynamics between the various stakeholders in the sporting industry, it is important to understand the perspectives of each one of them through a nuanced discourse that addresses the diverse issues concerning them. Both state and non-state entities are constantly striving to have a policy and regulatory structure that is not only welfare centric but ensures accommodating and addressing the evolving scope of issues. Many such issues have seen a rapid development as well owing to numerous judicial directions and interventions. The need to have a nuanced multi-disciplinary understanding of matters pertaining to sports is of utmost relevance today. This seminar seeks to provide a platform for the same discourse by engaging with sports law practitioners, law firms, lawyers, members of judiciary, academicians and institutional stakeholders.
